Redtime
January 2000

Just a hello message to all of you brave souls who have entrusted Redtime with your personal information. If you can think of anyone else who would freak out if they found out about this mailing and realized they weren't on it, feel free to send me their e-mail address.

Some general info: Redtime will not be playing their annual hospital tour this Christmas and though that has a lot of needy kids down in the dumps, it will give the guys some extra time to pursue their hobbies.

Steve is working on a hot model he got when he was 12 and he says it should be done in about 2 months. It's a really tight Mustang Convertible with racing strips. I don't want to give away too much, but let's just say it has movable parts that rule.

Ethan will continue running a midnight volleyball league in Brooklyn that he started online. I know it means a lot to him, and like lifting, takes up a good chunk of his free time.

Andy will dedicate most of his time to his hand puppets, knowing that laughter is truly the best medicine and in accordance with his release agreement from the hospital.

Jon, Andrew and Chris are starting a dramatic improv acting troop, reworking some of the lost Dukes Of Hazzard scripts where the Bo and Luke kill people.

I will send you all info on upcoming gigs and remember, the more time you spend online, the better your chances of winning something.

Note: Redtime will not be giving away anything online.

Steve - Resolves to practice classical guitar, using little known pieces by Handel and Mozart that he describes as, "pretty funky for being so old."

Jon - In an attempt to further his education, Jon has enrolled in a classic sitcom class at the local community college. He is presently studying a Three's Company episode where Jack overhears something of a sexual nature that he misunderstands.

Chris - Always the prankster, Chris resolves to cut the hotfoots down to one per rehearsal.

BAND NEWS...

Thanks to everyone who has been "faithful" to Redtime. Anyone who has been caught "cheating" should be ashamed of themselves. Now, for what the guys are up to...

Ethan decided to stop reading last week citing "long chapters" and "lack of funny things in books."

Jon recently won a "doing da' butt" contest in Boston. Asked what he did to win, Jon said, "I just feel the music in my ass. It's a cultural thing."

Steve has joined the ROTC. When asked why, he replied, "It's all about money for college. It's all about getting an education."

Andrew had a dream that playing the piano is weak and is presently sorting out its symbolic meaning.

Andy has given up his dreams of becoming a boxer after getting punched in the face by a drunk woman after the last gig.

Chris is spending more time online. Says Chris, "Chatting in chat rooms is fun...and funny! Sometimes I like to meet people after I chat with them. But sometimes they turn out to be kinda weird in real life."

* The weekend set is usually so-so.

BAND NEWS

Recently I received an e-mail from someone who thought they had seen Steve jogging at 7am on Court Street. That was in fact Steve, and his workout routine has rubbed off on other members.

Ethan - Tired of simply lifting, Ethan has introduced a heavy cardio base to his daily regimen. "Mostly just sprints," he said. "That, and a lot of sit-ups."

Steve - "Mon, Wed, Fri running stairs. Tuesday is the 'Play day,' which means renting porn and alienating my friends. Thursday is 'English sports day,' which usually means fencing and cricket till dusk."

Chris - "After a tireless night of 12 ounce curls (Coors, Busch, Milwaukee's Best) the next day is all about restoration, recovery and repair. Ice pack and Advil therapy through the day puts me where I need to be come nightfall...100% fill of mightimin C."

Andy - "I used to be really ripped. Then I realized that it was just a front. Now I never flex in the mirror. I just work out for myself...and the ladies."

Andrew - "Health shakes and Ginko. I've basically stopped eating. I want to be the man I always imagined I could be. I think I'm about 32% there. My neighbor just gave me a Solo Flex. I'm really excited about the increased definition I can look forward to in my carbs and my altoids."

Jon - "Pretty much I just dance. I try to incorporate dance into every day. Whether it's a dance contest or struttin' my stuff down at the local senior's center, I find a way to 'sweat it out.' And I catch a lot of random yuss and that ain't bad either."

"THE TAX FREE SHOW" *

The Bitter End, (212) 673-7030. 147 Bleecker St. between Thompson and LaGuardia. (ACEBFDQW to W 4th St.)

Someone recently asked me if Redtime musicians pay taxes too. She said, "With all the money that floats around the gigs, does Uncle Sam get his part, or do the guys just save the money for their futures?" The simple answer is...of course. You have to pay taxes in this country or you are breaking the law. Their attitudes about money, however, may surprise you:

ETHAN - "I'm tired of living my life only 'saving' money. It's like, at a certain point you have to spend a little. For instance, the other day I was at the liquor store and I saw a pack of smokes that I really liked, and they were like $5. So I bought them anyway and said to myself, 'Today I start living my life!'"

STEVE - "I used to think that money was evil. I would do anything I could to stay away from it. But then I couldn't buy food for my son and got kicked out of my apartment due to nonpayment of rent and I was like, 'wow'."

ANDY - "If I have $100, I'll give you $50...
If I have $1000, I'll give you $500...
If you have $50, I'll give you head."

CHRIS - "I don't really use money. I'm more about trade, IUD's and going heavily into debt."

ANDREW - "I once had a friend who was really obsessed about money. I told him to change but he wouldn't. And that's the real reason I stole his girlfriend, ruined his reputation and wrecked his car."

JON - "The only time I remember money being a problem in my life is when I killed a guy because he owed me some. But I guess that would be more his problem than mine."

* There will be no additional fee associated with the above-mentioned show beyond the cover, your drink bill, tax and tip.

THE LAST SHOW OF THE MONTH! *

Friday, April 28, 2000 11:30PM

The Bitter End, (212) 673-7030. 147 Bleecker St. between Thompson and LaGuardia. (ACEBFDQW to W 4th St.)

I recently received an e-mail from an interested fan asking how all of the guys got into music.

We all know the story of how Ethan was locked in the cellar for a month at age 10 with nothing more than a Walkman and an assortment of heavy metal tapes. "It was pretty scary at first," he said of the month, "but once I realized that it was for my own good and that they were sliding food under the door I just went with the flow."

Steve starting playing music on a dare from a friend that if he took piano lessons he would "turn gay or something like that." It is uncertain whether he has won or lost that bet.

Andy was introduced to music by his father, who used to make him play the flute for he and his poker buddies on Thursday nights while they threw things at him.

Andrew started his first punk band, Cookie's Monster, at age 8, after a particularly scary episode of Sesame Street and a week of bedwetting.

Chris took private lessons from a teacher as a child, continued on to star in his high school band and was a top performer at music school in college, where he won several awards and lost his virginity to a bubbly coed named Sally Edward Green.

Jon traces his musical experience back to 1990, when he started stripping for money at a Boston after hours joint. "A lot of people think that job was about sex for me, but it wasn't only that. It was about the people, the experience, the dance, the sex, but most importantly, the music."

There is nothing funny about Mothers' Day.

There is, however, something funny about the weekly Redtime creative potluck.

Ethan brought a song to sing that he wrote in the 1st grade. It was called, "I'm scared of the dark janitor with the funny breath like Grandpa's."

Steve smoked a small portion of rock cocaine and proceeded to tell us all how much he really wanted to die sometimes. But he said that other times he loves to play music and talk to the little man inside his guitar.

Andrew played that song from Peanuts...again.

Andy did a part of a monologue from a scene of a play that this one guy wrote about being alive and aware about life and some other really boring things.

Chris surprised us all by bringing a street whore to the potluck and making her eat soup that we all spit in.

Jon Did an interpretive dance about the night of his conception. He said he got most of his material from the video camera he set up in his parents' bedroom and the hours he spent pouring over footage.

*My Mom doesn't know about Redtime. Does yours?

"RIDE THE WAVE"*

Thursday, June 22, 2000 10:30PM

The Bitter End, (212) 673-7030. 147 Bleecker St. between Thompson and LaGuardia. (ACEBFDQW to W 4th St.)

Some little known facts about Redtime members...

- Ethan was allergic to peanuts as a child. This girl I met was "allergic" to his penis as an adult.
- Steve was a child prodigy and only had fake "friends" who teased him and used him for his computer games and Capri Suns.
- Chris was left off of the soccer team in 5th grade for what the coach described as "girlie stuff" on the sidelines. He appealed the decision and was advised to "join the band or something."
- Andrew was the last guy in his group of friends to go through puberty...by a long shot. He remembers fondly the day he finally was able to cum all over their backpacks.
- Andy was the only person in his grammar school who couldn't eat "sweets." He was also one of those kids with a thermos of soymilk and a block of carob who got beat up.
- Jon was kicked out of 3rd grade for creating a "fun club," which encouraged dangerous practices with small animals. He was then placed in a home for boys where he had his first sexual experience and became fascinated with fire. After a scandal involving an exchange student from Berlin he was sent to a military academy where his choices for free time included bigotry or drums. He chose drums...or did he???

* "The Wave" is not to be taken literally or figuratively. It may be flat.

"The Independence Celebration"*
FRIDAY, JULY 7, 2000 11:30PM

The Bitter End, (212) 673-7030. 147 Bleecker St. between Thompson and LaGuardia. (ACEBFDQW to W 4th St.)

At the latest Redtime potluck, the band was discussing what it means to be a patriot. I mean, obviously all members hang the flag and say the pledge, but on a deeper level what does it mean?

Ethan - The only time I ever thought about being a patriot was when I saw the movie 'Red Dawn.' I thought it would be cool to defend the country using stuff I found at the hardware store too.

Steve - The USA is about freedom to be yourself. If you don't want that freedom than pack your bags and go somewhere that sucks like China or London or France!

Andy - If the USA burned down tomorrow I would be scared about where I would go but I think that's pretty normal and none of the fires I set ever get very big anyway.

Andrew - I think we should see the USA in our Chevrolets because America's the greatest land of all.

Chris -The only way I'd ever leave the USA would be if someone found out about the 'old me,' before the treatment. But I think he's still asleep.

Jon - I think it's really screwed that I always get the worst things said about me in these e-mails when I'm the nicest guy in the group. That, and I don't like your country or your customs.

Note: Jon has never said or done anything that appears in e-mails. All other members, however, have.

* Our idea of celebration may be different from yours. Act accordingly.

"The Ying/Yang Show" *

TUESDAY, JULY 25, 2000 9:30PM

There was once a boy who wanted desperately to find the meaning of life. Much as he sought, however, he came no closer to finding the truth. Then, one day, he saw a band which defined for him all of that which he sought.

After that show I told him about another band called Redtime, and he agreed with some hesitation to attend their next show. He said he was impressed with their volume. The he ran away.

If Redtime can help a man who has found the meaning of life then they certainly can serve as a backdrop to your night of debauchery. Besides, you just might trick someone into liking you.

*Ying and Yang are just two guys I used to live with who asked to be in the e-mail. Your spiritual experiences may vary.

During a recent band discussion the topic shifted to hunting. Interestingly enough, it seems that this concept serves as a common thread for the guys. Remember, everything you read in your life is true...

Ethan never knew he was 'hunting' until his dad told him that all the animals he was killing in the garage were edible.

Steve was raised in a military family, moving around quite a bit in his childhood. He still remembers fondly the first time his Mother taught him about oppressing people and how it's actually harder to be one of the chosen few.

Andrew opposes violence in all forms. He does, however, enjoy dressing up in army fatigues and pretending to be a POW who gets a sponge bath every other month from a short nurse with a mustache.

Andy and Tim went hunting for bass strings last week. Tim got a cool new string. Andy got laid. Tim still thinks he got the better end of the deal.

Chris likes to play this 'game' where he locks himself in the basement with lots of weapons and waits for the 'Red Menace' to try and steal his constitutional rights. Luckily, the basement has a VCR, comic books, and a 'Kill Everybody' button.

Jon used to be enlisted in a foreign navy. He says it taught him discipline, work ethic and a cool dance called the 'Pink Torpedo.' He also understands better the fine line between experimenting with new kinds of people and making a permanent lifestyle change.

*There will be no weapons at the upcoming show.

Note: Please come armed and ready to boogie. Or you can come ready to sit in your chair and talk to your friends. The first one is probably better.

We're sure none of you watched Survivor either, but the guys did get together to talk about the TV phenomenon...

Ethan - I didn't really like the island. It was so petty and predictable. It seemed like every time there was a problem it would blame someone else. That's what I hate about islands.

Steve - I once took a trip to through South China Seas. It was right after I started running guns and stole my bride to be from her family.

Andrew - If I was on the island I would have been really funny. And that wouldn't be easy considering how I'm broke and I don't have any friends.

Chris - I think it's sick that these people are getting endorsement money now that they were on TV. I'll just keep making my money working on jingles for dog food commercials and sleep easy at night, thank you very much.

Tim - If I can survive the next gig without needing my fix that would be a start.

Jon - The thing I liked about Survivor was the fact that the cameras were following people around even when they didn't know it. Sometimes I follow people around when they don't know it too. It's a fun game I like to play late at night were everybody's a winner.

*Show your support, show your spirit, show your love, or just show up and be boring.

"The Big Thank You Show" *

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 2000 10:30PM

The Bitter End, (212) 673-7030. 147 Bleecker St. between Thompson and LaGuardia. (ACEBFDQW to W 4th St.)

We just wanted to tell you that we got together and decided that you are Redtime's favorite fan. There is no way to thank you for everything you have done for the band. We applaud you for so many reasons...

- When Ethan thought he might be bisexual, you and your male friend gave him the opportunity to experiment. He thanks you for making his lifestyle choice a little more clear. He understands that many people manage productive, fulfilling lives with herpes and looks forward to getting back in the dating scene.
- When Steve was considering wearing silk outfits, you reminded him that he didn't have the face or the body to pull it off.
- When Andrew was going to church every day you tricked him into watching soft-core porn and drinking whiskey with trashy women.
- When Tim thought about a day job, you forced him to admit that his degree was really "only a bunch of music classes at a pretend college," and that he can't read very well.
- When Chris wanted to leave the city you showed him a marching band picture from his high school yearbook and reminded him that if he left he'd become a loser again.
- When Jon D started playing horn you showed him the picture of Chris in the marching band.

- When Jon wanted to quit the band you left him threatening mail, harassed his family and made him lose his job. Though he is scared and broke and rarely laughs anymore, he is putting his life back together and is thankful for your help.

What can we say? You are the reason we still book gigs. We dedicate the show on Thursday to you. Come down and let us say "thank you." You've earned it.

Note: If you don't want to be the only one at the gig, bring some friends.

At the recent Redtime creative potluck we were discussing the Olympics and decided that you don't have to be robbed of your childhood in order to win a gold medal. Many of the band members have managed to lead normal, unspectacular lives while training for their day in the sun...

The Medal for 4 Meter Dash goes to Ethan for his walk to the stage for an encore after pretending to go backstage.

The Medal for Long Jump goes to Steve for his violent leap at a recent gig that killed a table and proved that your first instinct isn't always your best instinct.

The Medal for Kindness goes to Andrew for bringing three homeless guys to the last gig free of charge that groped women near the restroom and walked out on their drink bill.

The Medal for Bravery goes to WhyNot, who will play the bass without any help from Benny, the small guy who usually hides next to the stage and tells him which notes to play.

The Medal for Creative Expression goes to Chris, who is exploring the Phantom Sax Playing Technique, where notes are alluded to but not played. He asks that if he uses this technique, you use the Phantom Listening Technique, where you smile a lot and pretend that he sounds good.

The All Around Gold goes to Jon, who balances his life as a stalker with his life as a drummer. When asked how he manages the two he simply replied, "There's a lot of crossover involved."

* Training will be provided at the gig.

Note: We don't always play fair.

At a recent mandatory band field trip to Queens we were discussing the upcoming holiday. Though we celebrate the discovery of America with a day off from work, it should be noted that many discoveries never make it into the public consciousness. In fact, many Redtime members have made discoveries of their own, with varying degrees of success...

Ethan discovered that the only difference between playing gigs at The Bitter End and being a rock star is the money, the atmosphere, the sound quality, the women, the fame, the videos, the attention and the experience...basically nothing.

Steve discovered a way to look like he is listening without hearing a thing. He perfected this technique by locking himself in his apartment with his girlfriend for the weekend and looking through magazines.

Andrew discovered a fairly large park in the middle of the city where you can go to get away from the stress of the city. Apparently it is free and open to the public. He could not, however, find anyone to validate his claim.

Chris discovered that Columbus Day is pretty weak and that he hates America.

Tim discovered that the more foreign he appears, the more people think he is good at the bass and interesting to talk to.

Jon Discovered that most people don't like to be followed home after the gigs and that training a telescope on someone's window is not the same thing as going out on a date.

We were all sitting around watching the World Series recently when we got to talking about sports. Though it is no surprise that most musicians think of themselves as athletes, the guys brought up some interesting memories of what playing real sports was like for them growing up...

Ethan remembers that in 8th grade Gym class, a few of the thugs knew that the longhair with the Iron Maiden T-shirt was crazy enough to leave alone.

Steve claims that he was an amazing tag player when he was a kid. However, the last time Redtime played tag, Steve fell down as soon as the game started and cried about how terrible his childhood was.

Chris was the Second Baseman for his little league team. Though he was not a great player, he once got hit with a pitch at a very important moment and people clapped.

WhyNot was always tall for his age, and though he should have excelled at Basketball, he didn't . . . he did, however, date the high school slut and dye his hair blond to get attention.

Jon played tennis at every high school he attended, which was five due to his family's need to move to a new town every year because of Jon's tendency towards "inappropriate touch."

* If you come early, your prize will be a seat. As always, consider yourself our "special guest."

Getting ready for Halloween this year has been a real production for the guys. Between buying candy and trying on shoes we found little time for our weekly male sharing-circle. However, we did talk about our favorite Halloween costumes. I doubt the results will surprise you...

Ethan thinks that Halloween is just another way for America to make money. He also thinks he's the only one who went as "himself" when he was 14.

Steve never liked Halloween much, but that might be because his parents only let him keep the fruit. They also thought it was funny to tell him that he was going to be taken away by the state and that God didn't like to see him smiling.

WhyNot grew up in France or somewhere so he thinks most of the stuff we do is stupid.

Bennett won 1st prize for his "bum" costume in 8th grade, which was great for him because he was usually teased for the holes in his clothes and the smell of urine in his hair.

Jon was a ballet dancer last year, which was quite a stretch for a guy who usually spends his weekends in underground clubs high on X and dressed in leather G-strings and chain-mesh shirts.

* If you see a Hallow, run like hell.

One of the perks that comes with paying taxes and being a citizen is the right to vote. But the guys like to talk about politics too, and what they have to say will probably help you cast the right vote on Tuesday...

Ethan remembers telling his class that Barry Goldwater was going to win the election when he was 7. It wasn't until many years later that he found out his parents were Communists and that the FBI had been watching them all for years.

Steve voted for Jimmy Ryan in the 4th grade presidential race, even though Jimmy was only a pretend friend who always told the other kids stories about "Smelly Stevie."

Andrew, the band breadwinner, would like to vote Bush, but he's afraid that there might be problems with education and healthcare and poverty and human rights if he's elected.

WhyNot wanted to vote in the last election, but then he remembered that he doesn't care what happens in this country.

Jon D. is still trying to figure out what happened last weekend and how to live with a venereal disease . . . the fate of the free world is pretty far down his "things to think about" list.

Jon was voted "Most likely to move to New York and become bisexual" by his High School Guidance counselors.

* None of the President's actual Men will be at the gig listening to music and dancing.

Note: If Bush wins, dancing and music will be illegal...

Upcoming Shows At Bitter End

DEC 4th 9:30PM

DEC 11th 9:30PM

There is nothing funny about the upcoming show. Everything people will say on the street about Wednesday's show is dead serious. The guys are focused and ready, and have made a number of sacrifices to ensure that they give you exactly what you deserve...

Ethan has given up quitting smoking for the last two weeks and feels like a man on the verge of "something big."

Steve has been going directly to church after each gig he plays and nailing Redtime posters on the walls. Says Steve, "God told me to do it. He also told me to tell you that you better come to the gig."

Jon D has been working alone downstairs with the demo song on his keyboard and lots of bottled water and paper towels.

Chris is so serious about this show that he is considering quitting the band so he doesn't have to think about anything else.

WhyNot has begun running before breakfast every morning right after he gets back from buying the paper and walking his neighbor's dog.

Jon left his wife, cashed out his savings and changed his phone number. This, however, was more a response to some rather unsightly allegations than a commitment to the band.

* Now the joke is really over.

The Bitter End, (212) 673-7030. 147 Bleecker St. between Thompson and LaGuardia. (ACEBFDQW to W 4th St.)

It was recently discovered that many of the guys are not originally from New York City. They did, however, all find their way here, though the paths they traveled may surprise you...

Ethan was working for the circus as a drummer and fluff boy. When the troop hit New York this guy told him that he could make a ton of money playing drums in the clubs. He was right...Boy was he right.

Steve said he worked as a NYPD cop when he first moved to the city. It turns out that just he carried handcuffs and a gun and liked to get dressed up in this suit he bought at a costume shop.

Andrew grew up in the slums of Barbados, scratching out his living playing songs outside brothel windows. Now he has a studio in SOHO, a full time job, and a confederate flag T-shirt that he wears when he oppresses people.

Tim left home at 15; sure that he would make his fortune in the "Big Apple." When he was 25 this girl told him that Dallas wasn't the "Big Apple" and that he had no friends.

Jon came to New York in an effort to identify with his Puerto Rican roots. He has since grown to appreciate leather bars and "Gapwear."

Note: If you come to the gig, we might be able to extend your visa.

As we near the holidays, it's important to take a moment and reflect on how lucky we all are. I didn't ask the guys anything. Then I wrote this...

Ethan wants peace on earth for the holiday season. He also wants a glass bottle filled with gasoline, a dry hanky, and a lighter.

Steve takes a yearly trip to sit on Santa's lap at the mall. He never knew anything about the man behind the beard until last year when he invited the guy, Ed, over to his apartment and made love to him.

Chris has been saving all of his 2000 saliva and will use it to lube his entire body prior to the show.

WhyNot celebrates "Sankar," a Nordic holiday which celebrates farming and being cold.

Jon works in a homeless shelter during the holiday season so he can "give back" and so he can spend time with his "friend" Kenny, who stole his TV set in March.

* At least one day will be fun...if you come to the show.

Note: If you sit on a stranger's lap, you do so at your own risk.

"The Merry New Year Show"*

Saturday, January 6, 2001 10:30 PM

The Bitter End, (212) 673-7030. 147 Bleecker St. between Thompson and LaGuardia. (ACEBFDQW to W 4thSt.)

Redtime hopes that 2000 treated you well and wishes you the best for 2001. The band spent New Year's Eve in a car. A lot of you will think this was probably due to touring, but it was actually just a party that Steve set up in his uncle's van/home. He told us that he would take the seats out, but he couldn't find a wrench so we all sat around and told him how weak his party was. The guys did, however, make a new round of resolutions, and here they are...

Ethan resolves that 2001 will be the year for higher quality dining, and thus spent his first night of the New Year at one of the really great Mexican restaurants in Manhattan.

Steve has resolved to be kinder to children, partly because of his big heart and partly because he punched this kid on Christmas and then told him that Santa Claus saw all of the dirty things he did the past year.

Andrew resolves to get better at the piano and to stop harassing Jon D with threatening phone calls late at night about how Jon's keyboard might have an "accident" if he ever sits in again.

Chris has decided to finally make good on last year's resolution and begin disclosing his herpes to most of his sexual partners.

Tim resolves to spend time at the library because, as he puts it, "If I read books, then I will succeed in life. I sure as hell can't keep pretending to be a bass player with a car."

Jon resolves to finish Law School in a timely fashion so he can try to beat the kidnapping wrap that presently hangs over his head. As he puts it, "It was nothing more than a good old fashioned stalking and this is just another way for 'the man' to keep Pacific Islanders from getting ahead."

* If your name is Mary, then the show is doubly worth going to.

Note: If your name is Teddy....well, you know.

For all of the fun and games around the Redtime e-mails, for all of the tasteless attacks on accomplished musicians, for all of the general mayhem that gets tossed around about upcoming gigs, there is also room for heartfelt thanks and real gratitude.

Redtime thanks all of you who support their desire to spread good music and entertaining live shows. It is truly a pleasure to see people enjoying the vision, and your support doesn't go unnoticed. Thank you for being a part of the Redtime family and we wish you and yours the best for the upcoming year.

Come out on the 16th and don't miss our good friend Teddy Goldstein at 8:30 PM, but if you're coming to see Teddy make sure to tell the door you're there to see Redtime, as Teddy doesn't need or want your money, your sympathy or your courtesy claps after botched songs.

Be sure to tell him he was great after the gig though, because if you don't he might quit music and stop talking to people.

University of Redtime Early Spring Schedule!
Classes begin on Tuesday night!

At U of R you will get the personal instruction that is missing at so many other institutions of higher learning. We offer a "hands on" approach, with guaranteed results.

Just listen to what recent grad Teddy Goldstein is saying -- "I was like a guy on an island before I earned my degree. Now I feel like a guy on an island with a ton of chicks tempting me to be noticed."

New Classes Offered:

Music 101 - *History of Rock and Roll

Dr. Sherman takes you on a magical journey through the history of Rock. From OMD to Duran Duran, every pocket of Rock will be explored. From Depeche Mode to the Thompson Twins, from Men At Work to Falco, no stone will be left unturned.

Sociology 4400 - *How to Act at a Club

Dr. Walsh and Dr. Cheek will team teach this upper division course. They will cover all aspects of club behavior, including "How to get on the list," "Do's and Don'ts on the dance floor," and "How to do blow in the bathroom."

Note: Must already have taken and passed

Soc. 101 - *How to be Fake and Like it

Hum Ant. 200 - *How to Lose Weight Quickly

History 2200 - *Nordic Traditions

Dr. Jansveld will give a blow-by-blow account of Nordic History. He will cover farming, drinking clear liquor, being white and what it feels like to be cold. This course will require a field study in which the student is flown to Sweden and forced to act "ghetto" and claim "Crooklyn."

Mass Com 5467 - *Fact or Fiction

Dr. Eubanks teaches this interactive course modeled around Late Night Infomercials and the spiritual teachings of Ronco. The course will explore whether the rotisserie B.B.Q actually does seal in the juices, whether it makes sense to put your sweaters in a vacuum-sealed space-saver and why you would need a car polish that combats the damage from a blowtorch.

PE 101 - *Staying In Shape In New York City

Dr. Babu will offer modern solutions to the battle of the bulge. He will address such topics as "Are there any health clubs in NY?" and "Why don't I ever go to any health clubs in NY?" Required reading:

Why You Need a Health Club To Be Happy by Jerry Jive

The Great Cigarette Debate by Phillip Morris

* If you already have a higher degree you can still come to the show, but it isn't recommended.

If you feel the love for Redtime, come out and join the party. If you haven't been in a while, come out and remind yourself of what it was that hooked you once upon a time.

Come for the music, the atmosphere, the soul, the madness and the very real chance that someone will probably offer you a great job at the gig.

Just ask Teddy Goldstein, who said after the last show, "I was just sitting there staring into space when this guy offered me a job working at his Dad's production company. I went to meet him the next day but the address turned out to be a burned down building. There was one guy standing inside but he didn't seem to know about the interview and mugged me. It could have been one of those New York dream jobs, though, so I guess it was worth it. I'd go again tomorrow if he asked me to."

At a recent gig there was a girl who accused Redtime members of being stupid. She questioned whether or not we even read books. Well, we do, and we've put together a list of our favorites for your viewing pleasure. Whether curling up by the fire, spending a lazy day on the beach, or locked in your room trying to escape your sad life, these titles will expand your mind and trick people into liking you.

Confessions of a White Woman in America by Michael Jackson

A detailed account of the pop superstar's life that will appeal to music and sci-fi fans of all ages.

Heeeeeeeeeere's Jay by Jay Leno

This is the perfect book for anyone who likes Jay Leno or is about to die.

All Women are Ugly...Especially you by Cosmopolitan

This book addresses popular misconceptions about women's' health and beauty issues, most notably that women should be happy.

I Am Overrated by Tim Allen

I Wish I was Rated by Daniel Baldwin

Daniel's "Tell All" expose ends up leaving the reader wanting more, as most of his personal stories are about playing tag with his brothers.

"I loved This Movie!" by Rex Reed

With the Oscars right around the corner, I thought I might share a recent conversation I had with the band. We were all huddled around the TV on a rainy Sunday with the heat turned way up watching soft core. I thought it was a good time to ask what their favorite movies were...

Ethan- "My favorite movie ever was Star Wars. I thought Lucas's vision of Good versus Evil and the clearly Eastern inspired 'force' was brilliant. I also came for the first time ever while watching the scene where R2D2 and Chewy are playing chess."

Steve- "I'm really fascinated with movie makeup. Sometimes, after my girlfriend has left the house, I put on lots of lipstick and a short skirt and act trashy in front of the mirror. I also read books about makeup and movies"

WhyNot- "I think they should make a movie about a really tall bass player from Switzerland who gets tired of playing weak gigs in New York City. It would also be cool if he was rich and didn't have the clap."

Jon D. - "My parents didn't let me watch movies or eat fast food when I was little. I guess they were just being protective of their young son. I still wonder, though, why they told me that the Easter Bunny bites little boys and that sunshine is evil."

Bennett- "I spent most of my time growing up in a basement. I would play this game where I pretended to be directing a major motion picture. I also used to play a game where I pretended that I just ate dinner."

Jon B. - "I think Traffic should win the Oscar this year. The direction was flawless, the cinematography was breathtaking and they told my peoples' story with an even hand and an attention to detail. Viva Mexico!"

The other day after our group discussion about the role of the male ego in sexual interaction we got to talking about who could think up the best invention. Though none our ideas will replace the toothpick anytime soon, it is this thirst for bettering our way of life that we share with Einstein, Edison and the writers of Encino Man.

Ethan- "When I was 13 I wanted to invent the ultimate drum set. I worked on it for days and days but it always seemed like I ended up with a length of PVC tubing with an empty pen stuck in a hole in the bottom and a rubber stopper on the end."

Steve- "I want to invent a machine that turns wood into gold. Then all I would have to do is wait for a camping trip so I could finally prove to my dad that I'm somebody."

WhyNot- "I would invent a bass guitar that has a red button labeled 'Funky Fresh,' and a white button labeled 'Heroin Mainline.'"

Andrew- "I tried to invent a way to record dreams with a camcorder when I was in college but it seemed like lots of girls took it the wrong way."

Jon D- "I need to figure out a way to invent something small that you could store a bunch of information on like phone numbers and calendars. It would be affordable and it would have to fit in a jacket pocket. That kind of invention could really change my life."

Chris- "I would invent a machine that predicts the stock market results. That way I would know ahead of time when the market was going to drop and I could be ready to be supportive of people who lost money."

Jon- "I want to invent a TV that only plays reruns of Silver Spoons so I can spend some quality time with my friend Teddy, a box of tissues and 'The Ricker.'"

Note: This email has no official connection with Albert Einstein or his family. They backed out at the last minute.

WITH A TEDDY GOLDSTEIN DOUBLE SET AT 8:00 PM!

This will be a great evening of live music with the full band. Never before have 2 groups offered double sets in the same night, as far as I know. Just listen to what people are saying...

"If I could go to this show I would consider moving back to the U.S."
- Elian Gonzales

"I'm debating between the show and a sit-down brainstorm about my career...I think you'll see me Monday."
- Anthony Michael Hall

"I have always supported Chinese Music."
- George W. Bush

"Playing music for 2 hours without stopping...now that's really impressive."
- Sting

"If you let me yell at a head of lettuce I'll consider showing up."
- Tom Green

"Most my economic decisions are actually based on the Redtime schedule."
- Alan Greenspan

"It's a widely understood fact that in New York City the better band usually plays first."

-Teddy Goldstein

TEDDY GOLDSTEIN AT 9:30 PM!

The guys couldn't stay away from the stage. Come out and join us Tuesday and remember what you've been missing.

With Memorial Day soon on Monday I thought it might be nice to find out what the guys remember from their pasts, in one way to celebrate their diversity and in another to remember everyone who gets remembered on Memorial Day...

Ethan- I remember my 2nd grade teacher, Mr. Talvee. He said I was more interesting than his wife and definitely a better listener.

Steve- I remember one time when I got lost on my way home from getting beaten up by my sister at the arcade. I ended up at the library where I got back at everyone by reading books for free.

Andrew- I celebrate my favorite actor, John Goodman, whose career has inspired me to break off on my own sometime soon. He kicked ass in The Matrix.

WhyNot- I remember seeing live shows in Greenland in the 70's. There was a really great band there at the time. Actually it wasn't really a band, but when my Dad got drunk he would make us pretend that he was a singer and that he was nice to be around.

Chris- I think we should celebrate the men and women who have given their lives in defense of our fine country.

Jill- I remember when I joined Redtime and they told me that they were already famous and that they only played in the clubs to "stay real," and to "give back."

Jon B. - I remember moving to New York at the age of 17, straight out of military school with nothing more than a black leotard, a tube of hair gel and the burning desire to fall in love.

* Not you specifically, but that whole concept of people as a whole.

Redtime hopes you had a bountiful Thanksgiving filled with friends and family and love. Here's what we did...kinda

Ethan - I got a bunch of needy children together at my apartment and let them look my new computer while I ate stuffing. Then I told them all that the Great Turkey would be showing up later to give them all food and presents. Then I told them to go home and wait very quietly.

Steve - I had a virtual Thanksgiving on the Internet with some really cool friends I met in a chat room. I was "LOL" ing during the first course, had to "BRB" during the turkey eating and by dessert all I could do was ;) Then I jerked off quietly to some downloaded porn while my wife slept in the next room.

Andrew - My family did Thanksgiving the same way we have for the last 5 years. First the cat hunt, then the eating contest and finally the all important spanking.

Chris - I had three pretend friends over for an imaginary Thanksgiving dinner. It would have been great but one of them brought this girl with him who wouldn't stop talking and had nothing really interesting to say. But then I remembered that she was only in my imagination and she could just as easily be tied up and gagged in my bedroom. It ended up being a really fun night.

Jill, Viv & Jen - We went to a soup kitchen to sing to the homeless. Everyone was really cool except for this one guy Terry, who showed us his shiv while in line and has now started appearing at our gigs demanding that he's "on the list," and "engaged to one of The Singers."

WhyNot - I prepared a traditional Dutch dish called Grurster, which is basically snow and cheese served on white roll with butter.

Jon B. - Oh yeah, I love dark meat. Most weekends I hit the hip-hop clubs with a fistful of EX and...wait...what did you ask?

* Redtime gigs are like really cool comas that you get to wake up from if you want.

And don't forget to check out the website for future gigs, contact info, photos, and a mess of other "stuff."

UPCOMING SHOW:

Saturday, February 16, 2002
9:30pm

To be young and in love. To be old and hated. Whatever your station in life, the show Friday should have something for everyone. We'll be your Valentine. I asked the band what they thought of it all at this passionate time of year...

Ethan - I think the whole business of Valentine's Day has made it a joke. The whole business of me never listening to my girlfriend hasn't helped either.

Steve - Last year we went all out. We got dressed up in my girlfriend's g-strings and paraded our semi-naked bodies around the house while we listened to ABBA and ate mangos. Valentine's Day? Oh, I thought you were asking about what it felt like to be in an openly bisexual men's group in New York City.

Andrew - This year I'm going to cover the entire bedroom with rose petals. Then, when my lady gets home, I'll be like, Clean this mess up! Then I'll laugh and give her a big hug...then I'll give her a big broom and be like, No. Really. Clean this mess up!

WhyNot - I've been chatting online with this great woman from Jersey the past few weeks. I'm gonna go all out for Valentine's Day: First, I'll send an email to her cell phone directing her to a website that links to an e-card with Olivia Newton John's face on it saying Let's Get Physical...Then I'll probably watch Wild On! and cry myself to sleep.

Chris - Chicks dig my sax. That's the only prop I need this time of year. Let's just say cleaning the spit valve is an all-day activity at my house.

Jill, Jen & Viv - The girls have decided to stop eating chocolate until Valentine's day so they can get ready for the onslaught of gifts they're often showered with this time of year. In an interesting twist, they've also giving up showering until the 14th, a move most insiders are calling Art in action.

Jon B -       You- Meek, gullible, and alone.
                  Me- Aggressive, controlling and scary.

Sound good ? Serious inquires only need apply. Must have car, be willing to relocate and not know anyone in the city.

* Try to make it the lovers or others show. Probably best they both never meet...Unless? No, It'd never work.

Note: It actually can work. Just ask nicely.

UPCOMING SHOWS:

Friday, March 1, 2002 9:30pm

Friday, March 22, 2002 9:30pm

With the Olympics in full swing during this Patriotic time of year in this patriotic type of climate, I decided to ask the band who they looked up to most in life. In effect, who their heroes are.

Ethan - I really like just kickin' back and listening to some of the old, vintage Gilbert Gottfried tapes. I'm talking about the original good stuff...the good stuff...the one bit where he squints, the other one where he uses that annoying voice...the original funny. Just close your eyes and get ready to laugh your head off! I know I'll be doin' it!!!

Steve - I have mad love for John Stamos. However, I also have some love for hurting kids and smoking crack, so take it for what it's worth.

Andrew - I used to worship Face, from the A-Team when I was a kid. I still dream about spending long, uninterrupted hours alone with B.A. Barracus and a cabbage catapult.

WhyNot - Little known fact #1: WhyNot's hero growing up was Sturner Larisvelt, the only Bass Player in Greenland. Well known fact #1: WhyNot is no Sturner Larisvelt. That cat was funky out beyond belief.

Chris - I've always jerked off to the comic book Sad Sack...What?...Oh...Who's my hero?...Can I say Sad Sack?

Jill, Jen & Viv - We recently realized that all of us have fantasized about Emeril Lagasse . Jill wouldn't mind a little, "BAM!" Viv could do with a pinch of the "ESSENCE," and Jen can't wait for him to "KICK IT UP A NOTCH!"

Jon B - I still want to see the Olympics adopt my newest sport idea, "Naked Late Night Stun Gun." Sure I'd have the advantage at first. But I put the time in, night in and night out at the dorms. Just a thought. I'm sure "the man" will figure out another way to keep my people down, though. Big Up, Bermuda.

* I really could use about 50 heroes at this show...seriously.

Special Note: Saturday nights show is a benefit. All the door money will be going into a fund to help replace Will's (the author of the e-mails and Redtime's very unofficial manager) camera, which was left in the trunk of a cab after the last gig. Those of you that have expressed interest in giving money to help Will can donate what ever you wish at this gig when we pass the hat. So even if you hate the band and just like the e-mails, now's the time to come out and support the man who writes them and help facilitate the purchase of a new camera so he can use his twisted wit in a cinematic format.

Love, The Singer

With the Oscars fast approaching and the band all abuzz regarding the nominations I thought I should find out what they thought of the movies getting a look in this year's gala.

Ethan - I liked A Beautiful Mind. My family used to give all of us I.Q. tests when we were young so I could relate. Only later did I find out that having hot water thrown at you when you didn't take out the garbage wasn't really a test of intelligence at all.

Steve - In The Bedroom sucked. Too much talking. I made a movie in my bedroom last week with no talking and a really wild twist at the end-she actually finished first and enjoyed it.

Andrew - Ali reminded me of throwin' dogs in the ghetto growing up. A little known fact is that I was the only openly gay member of the Crips, and though I was no longer allowed to "bust caps" or "hoo-ride" and was forced to give up my colors once I came out, I know it gave others permission to do the same, and I think the gang is much stronger for it now.

Tim- A typical Training Day for me starts about 1 in the afternoon and involves coffee and an old stick of strawberry lube. It ends about 1:05 when I think about where I could sit down and wait for someone to page me.

Bennett- I though Nicole Kidman was amazing in I Am Sam. I also loved Michelle Pfeiffer in LA Confidential and thought Kim Basinger was phenomenal in Moulin Rogue. Bravo, ladies.

Jill, Jen & Viv - Someone told us that the "Rings" in question in Lord of The Rings were of the cock variety, so needless to say it was a bit of a letdown to watch a bunch of elves run around casting spells.

Jon B - I've never even heard of Gosford Park. I have heard of Prospect Park, though. You should come by visit me sometime late at night. I'll be the guy behind the restrooms with a mask on and a scorching case of herpes. Looking forward to it.

* We can't give you an Academy Award on Friday, but we may be able to send you home with this guy named Oscar we know who says he can "really bring it."

Note: Big, heartfelt thanks to everyone who came out last week and took part in the benefit for Will and his missing camera. He was able to replace what he lost and couldn't have done it without all of your generosity. Big Rock show, big love. Thank you all.

UPCOMING SHOW:

Saturday, March 30, 2002 9:30pm

Spring is in the air. With the passing of seasons we are reminded of the passing of time, and the way things change in our lives. I asked the band what Spring means to them...

Ethan - I try to live every season like it's Spring. It seems to work about 25% of the time, which isn't as high as I'd like, but I'll take it.

Steve - I was recently asked to pose nude for a calendar entitled "Brooklyn Boogaloo Beefcake 2003." You can't miss me. I'll be Mr. April, nude with my guitar, and out of shape.

WhyNot- Growing up in South Africa Spring was about fresh bread, long bike rides and a little less Apartheid, if you really wanted to "go the extra mile." We usually didn't.

Andrew - Spring for me is all about mo' Body, mo' body, mo' body. I like to call it "go time." You'll see me in hot pants one night at the club, a Mesh T the next day at the park and a leather G the next day for work, unless it's cold, in which case I just wear sweats.

Chris- I signed up to run in the annual "Songwriters Spring 7 K" through central park in May. This should be triply challenging for me as I don't write songs, I never learned how to run, and I only have about 0.2 K in the bank.

Jill, Jen & Viv - Singing in the park until dusk, backyard BBQs, and 4-ways backstage after gigs. It's called being a Redtime signer, and it's called Spring 2002.

Jon B - On March 21st I "spring" into action, which means lots of studio work drumming in the days for me and black leather gloves late at night until the middle of April for you.

*Come dawn it'll feel like the dead of Winter...if you're lucky.

Note: The ladies do not actually have 4-ways backstage after the gig unless you want to believe the story about Jon D., the 2 bottles of Kryshstal, and "the pump."

No Shows In April so be smart and "fix up" Saturday with the gang (not a real gang).

Softer, gentler, and with more love...

Ethan - I bought a cup of sunshine at an outdoor market last week and shared it with a young couple in the park. At nightfall, the woman fell asleep and I made love to her husband until the sweat of our passion and the morning dew were one in the same.

Steve - I wrote about a short story about friendship, put it in a bag and gave it to a homeless man as a gift. Well, actually I sold it to him for $2. And, actually, I told him that it was a sandwich.

WhyNot - I was invited to speak at a local grammar school about the perils of massive drug abuse and a reckless tendency towards disease. I was originally flattered, but now I think it was simply a case of the Principle opting for the lesser of two evils, as I've recently taken to shooting H and picking big, wet scabs on the playground during morning recess.

Andrew - I've decided to give back to Mother Earth. I know she could use a few less people nowadays, so me and some buddies are gonna get together Sunday and give back just a little. We're gonna meet at my garage about 3'ish, bring some rubber tubing, a few wet towels, shut the doors, enjoy some soft rock and just relax. Just kick back and take a long nap.

Jill, Jen and Viv - It's such a relief now that the guys have mellowed out. It gives the three of us time and energy to pursue our hobby of taking guys home from bars under the guise of a wild night and then killing them.

Jon D. - I'm working on me now. Self love. I'm not going to get all caught up in what other people think of me. Take the fact that my ex swears I punched her in the back when we broke up. Sure, it's true, and I of course I could buy into it, but that wouldn't be about loving myself, which is the most important thing you can do if you ever hope to love anyone else.

Jon B. - I haven't been creeping around in the bushes much at all recently. Though some might say that I've turned over a new leaf, some might also say that I bought a used van with a vanity plate that reads ETHERMAN.

*Hard and Sour...Death

Note: Eric Clapton turns 57 the night of the gig and "might" be in attendance.

We're the first band of the night - So Don't Be Late!

Summer is officially in the air. And that means bathing suit season for the gang, and they take it seriously. Come June 1st it's really all about mo' body, mo' body, mo' body. I asked the group about how they personally like to "flaunt it" when the mercury rises...

Ethan - I'm heavy into oils. I cover my body first thing in the morning with a heavy dose of sesame or truffle and just see where the day takes me.

Steve - As a kid I was teased for having pale shoulders, so I usually stay inside during the summer and practice guitar and look at the internet and eat and stuff. LOL ;)

WhyNot - Growing up in Sweden we celebrated "Frostur," a weeklong summer holiday during which we all congratulated each other about how tall and tan and beautiful we were. The last day is known as "Skastad," which involved drinking Vodka until you cheated on your spouse.

Andrew - I have a diet that usually takes off 15 pounds in a week right before the summer starts. All you have to do is cut out most liquids, like water, and throw up a lot.

Jill, Jen and Viv - We've set up a pool to see who can fit into a size 1 dress first. Lucky for us, the more you pay, the lower the number, so the winner will have the money to pay for the bogus dress they buy.

Chris - Last summer I was all about hot pants, tanks and crusin'. Now I'm all about trying to re-adjust priorities, get my gigs back and gain credibility.

Jon B. - I usually wear all black, so Summer can be a bit of a challenge for me. But challenges are good. For instance, I challenge you to guess when I'll be waiting for you on your couch when you get home. Hint: It'll be real soon.

* Not to be confused with, "We've got back," which we most certainly do not.

Note: Jen, Jill and Viv actually do have back, but mostly they're just frontin' anyway.

Upcoming Show

Saturday, July 6, 2002 10:30 PM

I realized recently that even though the band is living their rock and roll fantasy, the average fan isn't. But it's not all about the glitz and the glam. Redtime is about people. Real people with real lives and yes, sometimes even real problems. I asked the band members to peel back the curtain and tell me what a typical day in their lives looks like...

Ethan - Any day I get out of bed before noon is what I like to call a "money" day. On "money" days I reward myself first thing with pizza and a nap. Then it's all about the music...and sometimes the movies.

Steve - I start the day with yoga. A lot of people think I mean eastern stretching exercises when I say yoga, which is good, because that sounds better than skin-popping heroin, which is what yoga is code for in the junkie circle I run with.

WhyNot - I like get out and meet the people first thing in the morning. Take today, for instance. I met this 8-year-old kid who was lost and drove him to Coney Island. Then I gave him a few dollars, put him on a ride, told him I was going to use the bathroom, and just drove home instead. It's really all about making connections and changing lives.

Andrew - I love sex in the A.M. I also love being creative in the A.M. I'll get a few whores, a pad of paper, turn on the computer, and just run with it. Worst case scenario - Hand job. Best-case scenario - Pure Magic.

Jill, Jen and Viv - We live together, which helps us be productive. However, we also sleep in the same bathroom and have terrible head lice, which sometimes hurts productivity. It's up and down...but isn't life, too?

Chris - I'm a trained military man, so I like to be up early and get a head start on oppressing people. Sure, they're harder to find these days, what with all the PC lefties, but being an artist gives me the freedom create totally new ways to keep people down and still get paying gigs.

Jon B. - I work late nights, so I'm usually still up at the crack of dawn and dog tired. It's usually all I can do to just check the knots, make sure the basement windows still are nailed shut, cut out some letters from magazines headlines and change the bedpan before I pass out.

* Don't look too closely. You might not like what you see.

Note: If you have to close your eyes, expect to meet Doctor Dark Funk, Ph.D.

Though they're not all still single, the band does remember what it was like to date. I asked them to tell me about their experiences in the "dating game."

Ethan - I remember my first blind date. It was really an awkward night, partly because we had been set up by friends, but mostly because she was blind.

Steve - I'm heavy into Eastern thought and Kama Sutra. I like to take a date back to my place, cover her in scented oils, put on a nature sounds CD and talk to her about how deep I am while I read a book and ignore her.

WhyNot - A really erotic move I like to use on a first date is to order a chocolate dildo for dessert. When they say they don't have one on the menu I pull one out of my bag and start poking her in the thigh with it under the table while I go, "huh? huh? huh?."

Andrew - I mostly try to date within the band. I like to set up "group dates" where we all meet somewhere romantic and just see where the night takes us. Usually, though, it's just me, Dryden, some Spanish Fly and lots of innuendo.

Jill, Jen and Viv - We like to go to the arcade where Viv works in midtown and wait for someone to get past the 9th level of Tempest. Then we force him into the bathroom at knifepoint and make him go for an extra man on Jill's "bonus level."

Bennett - I only date within my zip code. It may seem odd, but it really works for me because I can't seem to leave my apartment without puking and I've never gone on a date.

Jon B. - I date almost exclusively on the weekends. I'll go out on a Friday afternoon in the van with a dozen roses, 10 feet of rope and a hypo and just try and make a connection. I think the reason it works so well for me is that I'm not very picky and I'm not really looking for anything long-term.

* The entire show will likely take place in a single night.

Note: If you expect to meet a knight of the shining armor variety at the gig, think again.

Lineup

9:15 PM - Redtime

It has been a while, hasn't it? Well, we've missed all of you terribly and I thought it would make sense to bring everyone up to date on what the gang has been up to since we last talked...

Ethan - I've spent the summer putting the finishing touches on a betterment program aimed at introducing "at risk" farm children to the ways of city life. Basically we remove a teenager from the negative setting of the farm and set them up with the choice to pursue graffiti art, low-level gang activity or break dancing in the South Bronx. Many thanks to the MC Murder of the Crips for his tireless dedication to seeing this program through.

Steve - I've been giving massages at an eating disorder clinic in Brooklyn. It's been a really rewarding experience and an added bonus is that most of my "clients" are super thin and have really low self-esteem.

WhyNot - I landed the role of Yurgol The Scarecrow in a Eastern Bloc remake of The Wizard of Oz that ran for 2 nights at my apartment. I also landed myself in court over some rather unsightly allegations that Dorothy was only 17 and that Jon Dryden, who was playing the Lion, apparently found the courage to paw her repeatedly backstage.

Andrew - The summer for me is all about hip-hop. I try to go to live shows as much as possible; I describe most of the things I see as "butta," and I changed my chat room handle to str8gansta. I also bought a gun.

Jill, Jen and Viv - We started a reading group in June where each member picks a book for all of us to read and then we share our thoughts about what it meant to us, how it might have changed us, and how hard it is to have a reading group where no one really reads the books. Mostly we just gossip about movies and prank call cute guys we know.

Chris - I've gone back to school at NYU for a Masters in English. Even though I bought all the books, I'm not officially enrolled, due to some misunderstanding about my transcripts, but I do hang out in Washington Square Park and sell weed to students who tell me what happened in class. Apparently Dr. Brentano's class is a real killer.

Jon B. - I getting ready to "settle down" with one of the women I'm seeing right now. You just can't play the field forever. I'm thinking the one by the radiator, but I do have a decent rapport with the one under the staircase. It'll be a private ceremony anyway, so I let you know.

* The "big show" may refer to a sensual gimmick we've set up with WhyNot planned for the 4th song.

Note: We haven't rehearsed the bit, but have it on good authority that it will be a winner.

UPCOMING SHOW

Halloween -- Time TBA

In honor of Columbus Day, one of the Few Holidays the Band does observe sincerely, I asked everyone to tell me about their travels, both near and far...and what they have "discovered."

Ethan - I love traveling the globe. I took a trip down the Nile, saw the Leaning Tower of Pisa, and the Ruins of Machu Picchu - all last week - and all online. Where should I go next? Maybe Egypt. Maybe Spain. Maybe this free porn site this guy told me about. I can go wherever I want, and without ever going anywhere.

Steve - I just think it's really lucky that Columbus found such a cool country. I mean, he could have found Russia or something instead and then we would all be super-weak and wear gray clothes.

WhyNot - I moved to the States in 1989, with nothing more than a bass, 3 tank tops, a laminated photo of Scott Baio, and willingness to dream.

Andrew - I went to High school in Mexico, so I understand the issues that face our nation. I also read this book called, The Issues That Face Our Nation, so I have a pretty clear handle on our Nation and many of its issues. I also sell H at gigs. Lo quieres?

Jill, Jen and Viv - We've discovered that, thankfully, most of the men who are posting online dating ads really do like quiet nights in, are equally at home at a black tie event as at a dive bar, love to cook, truly care about people, are really tired of the pick up bar scene, and genuinely think looks are over-rated.

Chris - I built a boat when I was 7 to enter in the annual Boy Scout "Boat Off." I lost to a bunch of other kids who's dads were probably architects or engineers or maybe not drunk kid haters.

Jon B. - I've discovered that chicks dig guys who have seen the world. But I've also found that after about 4 days in my basement chicks will usually try to dig large holes under my house. I've stopped trying to figure 'em out, I tell you.

* If you've never been south of 14th St., look at Saturday as exploring uncharted territory

"The Trick Is Our Treat Show"*

Halloween - Thursday, October 31, 2002     10:30 PM

Huge Show - Special Guests - Extra-Long Set

No one band says Halloween more often than Redtime, so get dressed up (or down), and come out to the party

THE BITTER END

147 Bleecker St. btw. LaGuardia & Thompson
ACEFS to W 4th St.
6 to Bleecker St.

Halloween. I asked the band what they thought of the spooky holiday and what it means to them...

Ethan - I'm stocking up on razor blades and apples this year. I figure I should shave before I invite the teen group I mentor over to do my annual caramel dipping / tutoring party.

Steve - I don't have much time to plan this year so I'll probably just paint my face brown, put on a burlap poncho, and play the gig face down on the stage. A lying sack of shit.

WhyNot - Growing up in Kamchatka we celebrated Yolstaol, which was sort of like Halloween, except it was in January and was scary for a reason...you see Yolstaol was sort of about costumes, but Yolstaol was mostly about stale bread and senseless beatings in the snow.

Andrew - I used to get my candy bag taken every year by the neighborhood bullies. It was partly due to my unwillingness to fight back, but it was mostly due to the fact that my dad was a dental assistant so instead of candy he would give the kids carrots.

Jill, Jen and Viv - We're going to be sexy genies. We just don't know if we can find costumes, because we've never seen anyone go as sexy genies ever.

Chris - Every year for me growing up was the same. I'd say, "Mom, I want to go as Spiderman," and she'd say, "Well, are your Underoos clean? I didn't think so. Now go put on that football helmet I found you and get mommy some candy."

Jon B. - I usually go as a really nice guy who doesn't have a torture lair in his basement. I'll put on a sweater, get a buffet together for the girls, bring the record player downstairs, and we'll spend the night dancing and gossiping and chatting until someone starts crying and asking when she can go home. Regardless of what time that actually happens, I call that moment November 1.

Note: If you actually see a Hallow at the show, buy the guy a drink for God's sake.

The spirit of the holidays is alive and kicking at Redtime central. The band cares about this time of year, and feels strongly about the process of celebrating good stuff only once every 12 months...

Ethan - I'm asking Santa for a "SuperFan." He/she would be really down with my sound, totally respectful of boundaries, excited about getting the word out about the band, and willing to live in / clean my bathroom while wearing a ball-gag.

Steve - I grew up in a strict family who believed that Christmas was evil. That may have been about religious beliefs, but I suspect it was more about the fact that my family knew that Santa is really Satan.

WhyNot - I celebrate Larstur, the Dutch Christmas, with the 3 other people I know from Amsterdam here in New York. We basically sit around and eat toast with butter and cheese and spread able chocolate while we discuss how great it is to be so well adjusted, tall and friendly.

Andrew - I think the over consumption and senseless gifting bullshit that big business pushes is absurd. I was talking to my buddy the other day on my cell about this TV show I'd seen about this new video game based on the Movie Lord of The Rings, and was like, "Dude, consumption is for the weak."

Jill, Jen and Viv - We did a gift exchange last year that really fell flat on its face. Jill got Viv a super-saver card from DuaneReade, Viv got Jen lots of spam from a website she visited while on her computer, and Jen got Jill evicted for lighting a fire in the basement of her apartment.

Chris - I get really into the spirit of the holidays. I mean, I go all out. I put all my top shelf pornos away and stick with Santa Cums But Once A Year for the 2 weeks leading up to the sacred date, and brew 10-20 gallons of egg nog in my bathtub and then let the neighborhood kids come up and drink it with straws while I play the Mannheim Steamroller Christmas CD.

Jon B. - No matter what your belief system, this time of year is all about giving. Take me for instance. I gave the families on my "list" an extra week to come up with their "gifts" for me, and I like to give the girls the greatest gift of all - hope of rescue and extra water.

* The band's favorite seasoning is Marjoram.

Note: If you bring plan on bringing Marjoram to the show, keep it to yourself.

Human Development 3300 - Are You giving People The Creeps? - Dr. Jansveld

Through this 6 week intensive, you will find out once and for all if people are getting creeped out by you on a daily basis. Are your eyes shifty? Do you show up at the wrong time and say the wrong thing? Are you prone to wearing tank tops and jeans shorts?

Note: The final exam will be a series of tests on the creep-o-meter, after which point those who fail the final will be asked to continue their studies with each other in a separate facility.

English 112 - Dinner Party Conversational Literature - Dr. Walsh

Tired of never knowing what to say when people start talking about books? After this class, which will pay particular attention to when to smile knowingly, when to laugh and why and who wrote some of the books throughout history, you'll never be at a loss for words.

Note: No reading will be required.

Women's Studies 100 - Size Actually Does Matter - Dr. Seifers

Dispelling the myth that size actually doesn't matter, this class will offer concrete proof that size does indeed matter. Notable catch phrases like "The motion of the ocean," "It's not what you have but how you use it," and others will be proven to be nothing more than feeble attempts of small men to feel adequate.

Criminal Justice 1313 - Loopholes - Mr. Babu

Though possessing no formal teaching degree at this time, Mr. Babu brings a track record of unparalleled excellence in the arena of committing heinous acts against humanity and skating away scot-free. He'll cover such favorites as intimidation and the potential witness, how and when to grease a judge, and how cover your tracks like a real pro.

Note: Must have completed P.E. 1214 - Knot Tying and Pressure Points, as well as Chemistry 3321 - The History of Knockout Drugs

With Valentine's Day here again, I thought I'd ask the Gang what they thought of love, and of the day of love itself...

Ethan -I like to bring the neighborhood kids up to my apartment every year and tell them stories about what it's like to be in a long-term relationship. Then my wife and I show them uneventful, guilt-ridden sex and share what we're really thinking about during the act.

Steve - I wanted to go all out this year so I dressed up like Don Juan and learned basic Spanish just so the role would be more convincing. It was muy bueno except for the pequeno problema con mi pene.

WhyNot -I know a lot of guys say, "I don't need to take a single day out to show someone I care. I do it every day." I really don't, though, so having a day when you can fix everything with a $10 bouquet of flowers and a card is a really efficient way of keeping things running "smoothly."

Chris - I play sax, which really goes a long way on Valentine's Day. I really need it, too, because every time I meet a woman I start spitting uncontrollably and bragging about how cool it is that I play sax.

Andrew - I usually play some kind of funny joke on my wife on Valentine's Day. I'll buy her a box of chocolates and when she opens them, I'll be like, "Are you going to eat all of those?" Then when she looks sad, I'll be like, "Just kidding." Then when she starts to eat one I'll be like, "Jesus, are you gonna eat all of those?" Then I'll be like, "I'm kidding...I'm kidding...I'm sort of kidding."

Jen, Jill and Viv - We made a spreadsheet with the names of all of the guys we've ever dated down one row, all the guys we've ever liked but never dated down another row, and all the things we want to have in our dream relationship down the last row. Now we're just waiting for the computer to do its thing. Yes, it's a pentium.

Jon - Love is funny. One day you're lying in the bushes with nothing more than a pair of binoculars, a bottle of ether and a paper cup with a lipstick smudge, the next you're taking a dinner tray down to the basement and "making out" with a beautiful woman.

Seeing as how we've had a particularly cold winter this year in New York, I thought I'd find out what the gang thinks of all this cold weather...

Ethan - I love the winter for one simple reason - My ice skating club that meets every Tuesday and Wednesday and Thursday and Friday night at Prospect Park. You can think of it as 9 guys with skates who like cold weather, or you can think of it as a hobby that's really more like a way of life. Either way...it rocks, and "The Prospect Ice Guys" rock too!

Steve - I tried something different this winter. I only got out of bed if it was snowing. My girlfriend would be like, "Steve, you need to go to work," and I'd be like "Is it snowing? Didn't think so."

WhyNot - I start straight up buggin' in the wintertime, yo. I'm tryin' to hoop daily, and with snow on the ground, you know what I'm sayin', I fo sheesie can't find any brothas out there that want to get served on the regular...So I usually just end up reading good books or looking at interesting websites.

Andrew - I like the "Mob Coat Look," so winter is super fun for me. I also like the "Gay Leather Bar Look," so summer ain't so bad either.

Jill, Jen and Viv - We love the winter because we get to spend it inside with our guys. For Jen that means usually spicy food and being ignored, for Jill it's more about inappropriate outbursts and equally inappropriate apologies, and for Viv that just means 3 words - Playstation 2 Tournaments.

Chris - I sleep outside sometimes with my sax so Winter is probably my fourth favorite season to be alive and probably my first favorite season to be dead.

Jon B. - I like to spend my days in Central Park. The white blanket of fluffy cold covering the trees, the peaceful tranquility of the season, the beauty of falling snow, the inability of sound to travel very far, the decreased sensitivity of the police dogs' noses, the large, deep drifts of snow to hide in with a mask on...I could go on and on.

Redtime Tee Shirts + The Funk = Be There, Fool

THE BITTER END

147 Bleecker St. btw. LaGuardia & Thompson
ACEFS to W 4th St. / 6 to Bleecker St.

April is about 2 things for the gang: Long hours poring over tax forms and April Fool's Day. I asked them about the holiday that doesn't get much "pub" but has major "street cred"...

Ethan - On April 1, 1980, when I was 7, my brother told me that he was dying of dyslexia and the only way he could be cured would be if I read The Great Gatsby in one night. I kept asking him for help with the big words and he'd be like, "Just read...I'm dyslexic and I'm dying!"

Steve - My Mom used to get us good every year. She'd say that she wanted to give us hugs and gifts, just for being us. Then she'd say the hug WAS the gift. Then she'd say she was too tired for hugs tonight.

WhyNot - In Holland we celebrate Karlstar's Day on April 1, which basically involves paying tribute to Yonald Karlstar, the inventor of Holland, which we love celebrating, but also the inventor of hatred, which we try not to make TOO big a deal about.

Andrew - I took my girlfriend out for a fancy dinner with all the trimmings this year. Then when the check came I threw a glass of water in her face, told her I hated her, and ran out of the restaurant without paying. Then, on April Fool's Day, I really got her good with sugar on her eggs when she wasn't looking.

Jill, Jen and Viv - We like to find a guy at a club on April 1st and take him back to the pad under the guise of letting the funk flow. Then when we get back we'll all put on sweats, break out the magazines and complain about the women at our jobs that piss us off.

Jon D. - I played a great prank on my roommate this year. I told him I was feeling really down and then later that night I pretended to be dead in my bed with a piece of paper pinned to my shirt that said, "YOU DID THIS."

Jon B. - I got the girls really good this year. When I brought the dinner gruel down to the basement I also brought a boom box and told them there was going to be a back spin / electric boogaloo contest and that the winner would be going home to her family unharmed. Nobody won, but there were big laughs.

Note: Just seeing you and the wary co-workers you dragged out for the night is always payment enough.

UPCOMING SHOWS:

May 14 - 9PM

May 21 - 9PM

May 28 - 9PM

This should be a real blast Wednesday. Andy H on Bass, Tony M on Drums, and our own WhyNot on Guitar. It's just like musical chairs, except you're not 6 anymore, you have a few friends now, and the 1st grade bully works for you in maintenance.** As for Mothers' Day, here's what they had for me...

Ethan - Last week my Mom was like, "Yo, I want to come check your set, dog." And I was like, "Mom, please stop. I'm scared, and it's because of what you just said," and she was like, "Bet."

Steve - Mothers' Day for me is about getting together 4 cheese and fruit gift baskets from Target and making sure they all make it to the right ex-girlfriend by Sunday...and of course I'd like to send a little bread for the kids, but you know how it goes. Dr. Phil says I'll find my way when I'm ready, and I'm just not ready yet.

Andy H. - I took my Mom out for Dinner to a sit-down restaurant last year. It was super funny because she was sure it was going to be Red Lobster the whole time we were driving but then she was really surprised when we got there and it was The Olive Garden. It was sweet...and it was dutch.

Andrew - My mom is a member of MAMD. which is a spin-off of MADD and is made up of the mothers out there who are against both drunk driving and Mothers' Day. Actually, some of them are just against Mothers' Day, because you don't have to be against anything but what the letters stand for, but most are against drunk driving too.

Jill - This is a really special time of the year for me because I have 2 kids that my husband doesn't know he fathered and that he rarely sees because of the whole, "deceit about the kids I hide from you" thing. Anyway, me and the kids spend a lot of quality time together on Mothers' Day in the closet playing jacks and stuff. Then come Monday, it's back to business as usual.

Chris - I tried to organize a plan to fly all the Moms and Dads of the band out for this gig. It was really close to happening, too. I had gone on the web and everything and then it just sort of fell through.

Tony M.- I decided that I'm going to spend this Mothers' Day yelling at my mom about all the stuff she did when I was young that screwed me up as an adult. Hey, if you can't love yourself, you can't love anybody else. I just want to sit and be.

*If your Mom is super mixed up, you might want to reconsider bringing her to the gig on Wednesday.

** There is nothing wrong with working in maintenance. Nothing huge, at least.

UPCOMING SHOWS:

May 28 - 9PM

With Summer just around the corner, I thought I'd ask the gang about the hot weather that is surely on the way, and how they stay cool during the summer months...

Ethan - I usually draw the blinds, get some really high-end lotion out, turn the TV volume down a little so I don't disturb the neighbors, and...what?...oh, wait...did you say "beat the HEAT?"

Steve - I hate sweat, but more than that I hate people who sweat, so let's just say the summer can be a bit of a challenge for my family. What really annoys me, though, is when I feel like they're just not trying hard enough.

WhyNot - Come June you can always find me cold chillin' in Reykjavik, Iceland. I say cold chillin', which is funny because really I've always leaned more towards the illin' type of lifestyle, but it's hard to ill in Iceland when everyone is sitting around eating dried fish.

Andy H. - I know a lot of people go to the Hamptons, but I always spend my summers in Queens at this really cool BBQ party at my buddy Matt's house. That dude is super crazy fun, plus he's a X dealer with an albino boa and phat beats.

Andrew - Last summer I grew a mustache. Then I did other things that made people hate me. It was a tough summer.

Jill - 1 piece bathing suit...OK - 2 piece bathing suit...sexy - 3 piece bathing suit...DA BOMB. (I have a rather unsightly 31-pound growth on my back)

Chris - How do I beat the heat? 11 words - Force neighborhood kids to bring me ice water with physical threats.

Tony M.- I'm going to buy a car this summer so I can get around town a little easier. I'm also going to buy a girlfriend so I can get around first base a little easier. I guess ideally if the woman who sells me the car is also for sale, that would be the most convenient set up, but I'm sure I'll have to buy her somewhere else.

*If Ethan sees his shadow on the walk back to the stage for the encore, expect 5 more weeks of spring.

Note: If Ethan doesn't take an encore, expect the unexpected.

OUR ROCK + YOUR ROLE = THE DREAM REALIZED

UPCOMING SHOWS:

May 28 - 9PM

People have asked to see an early schedule of Summer courses being offered at Redtime U this year, so they can "beat the rush." Makes sense...

SOC. 2123 - How to Tell Someone You Hate Them - Dr. Eubanks

In this course Dr. Eubanks will cover such topics as, "When to do it," "How much guilt is too much guilt?" and "Hate is never too strong a word."

Note: Many students have assumed this course is simply a repeat of SOC. 1500 - How To Tell Someone They Lack Talent. It is not.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION 220 - Hittin' Da Skinz - Dr. Walsh, Dr. Seifers

This course will be team taught for the first time in the University's history. The professors will cover all relevant topics, from proper ways to "Tap dat ass," to "Just what are da boots, and how do I knock 'em like a vet?"

CHEM 3300 - The Difference Between Exchanging Bodily Fluids and Getting Pissed On - Dr. Jansveld, Dr. Sherman

In this one day intensive, you'll join Drs. Jansveld and Sherman as they demonstrate, first hand and with each other, the not so subtle difference between the "other fluids" associated with oral sex, and having somebody piss on you.

Note: Must have taken and passed CHEM 2200 - Did I just Get Spit On In Bed?

DRAMA 2323 - What's The Deal With Shakespeare? - Dr. Cheek

Dr. Cheek will spend 6 weeks asking this tough question to whoever is listening.

Note: All student will receive an All of Shakespeare in 5 minutes handbook to use at dinner parties and in other tough spots of "culture."

HUMAN DEVELOPMENT 4433 - When Did I become Such an Asshole? - Dr. Babu

Dr. Babu continues to offer this class, one of our most popular, on a first come, first served basis. He'll take you through the well established steps towards assholism, making stops at : "That guy is hard to read," "That guy is unique but tough to be around," "That guy is kind of a prick, but I don't think he knows it," and finishing up with, "Oh that dude. He's a straight up asshole."

THE BITTER END

147 Bleecker St. btw. LaGuardia & Thompson

I recently got an email from a fan wondering if the band ever reads. I did a little digging and found out that last year alone, Redtime read 11 chapter books.

It also inspired the gang to release its "Hot Books for the Summer" must read list...

I Figured Out Your Life This Week - Now Change It* by Oprah Winfrey

In this interesting collection of anecdotes, Oprah explains what you should do next, to whom, and why...She also does 3 fabulous makeovers on ex-ugly people and rates spring-time wedding dresses, all the while receiving personal growth Mantras from Depak Chopra and "real talk" from Dr. Phil...and it all really matters to her.

Carrot Top - A Career Retrospective* by Carrot Top

In this racy tell all, Carrot Top covers his entire career in show business, from the 1 time he did stand-up to his first C-A-L-L-A-T-T commercial. The rest of the book focuses on the 22 other C-A-L-L-A-T-T commercials and how he got so yoked.

Bling Bling for the Goofy White Guy* by Master P

In this step-by-step how-to manual, Southern Rapper Master P tackles the thorny problem of how to "Rock Ice" when you're white and goofy. From the diamond stud in the left ear all the way to the massive "first name necklace," P smashes stereotypes and manages to say something deep about what Bling is, and why we all need it so badly.

The Tommy Franks Story - Battlefield Hero, Interior Decorator* by Tommy Franks*

From Regime Change to changing the wattage on the light bulbs, from sneak attacks on Baghdad to sneaking up on the grim in your bathroom, from innocent civilians deaths to guilty pleasures in your newly remodeled kitchen, this book has something for everyone...Well, not everyone, but if you like stories about killing people or re-doing your house, it'll work for you.

BIG SHOW! BIG SHOW! BIG SHOW!

Now that summer is officially here, everyone is talking about shares in the Hamptons. Everyone, that is, except the band and everyone they know. But here's where the gang would "summer" if they could...

Ethan - I'd love to get a summer place in the South Bronx. Sure it'd be hot and kinda dangerous and not all that great to look at, but it's time I did something for me, dammit! And it's time I did something for the birthplace of Rap, dammit! And it's time I did something for the kids, dammit! Something for the kids!

Steve - I spent last summer in Florida. See, I won this trip through the mail and all I had to do was pay for the hotel. I sure was lucky to have won that trip. It was only like $2100 for 4 days (Meals, entertainment and reason to want to live another day not included).

WhyNot - I don't need to go anywhere this summer because I'm turning my bathroom into a really cool spa. It's gonna be totally tricked out. First, I'm going to hang some pooka shells on the shower head. Then I'll buy a plant for the sink. Once I'm finished with all that I'll just invite the guys over, kick back and relax.

Andrew - I'm going to summer in Washington Square Park. I figure it's got everything I need. Hot pretzels, bottled water, timed chess games for money, fake weed dealers, random dudes on bikes with snakes around their necks, people doing that hippy thing with the 2 sticks and the baton you pass back and forth, drum circles, and of course Tic and Tac, the most dynamic street entertainers in the city. Done.

Jill - I threw a "Summer Kick-Off Party" this year on June 1st. Only one guy showed, but I think the turnout was low because summer didn't actually start until June 21st, and not because they hate me, which is what the one guy who did show up said as he left with 2 plates of food.

Chris - I like to stay in the city for the summer. I'll dust off my outdoor sax, put on my teva's, and just wander the streets, playing for the love of music, and for the small chance that I could find myself in caught up in a 3-way by virtue of wandering the streets playing a sax in a pair of beat-up sandals.

Jon B.- Like usual, I'll be at the community swimming pool every day this summer. It'll just be me, my sketchpad, my stun gun, and a big bag of candy. A really big bag of candy.

* Yes. It's on the street.

Note: I sometimes wonder who gets this far into the email. I guess you do.

UPCOMING SHOWS:

FRIDAY, August 29th, 2003, 10:30 PM

Just a reminder about the blow-out gig Saturday Night at the Bitter. We realize it's been humid and rainy recently, but we promise a cool show and sweat buckets stage-side. Here's what hot moisture means to the gang.

Ethan - For me the summer is all about the heat index. Temperature is for suckers. Show me a sky-high heat index and I'll show you one hot guy: me, of course! LOL

Steve - My electric guitar seems to get lubed up in the humidity, which is good for my sound. My "piccolo" hasn't seemed to get lubed up much at all this summer, which is neither here nor there for my sound, but sorta sucks otherwise.

Why Not - When I was young we were beaten for sweating outside the house. It made August a particularly tough month for me, primarily because August was always hot, but also because August was the month in which my folks would tie me up to the front porch and wait for me to be bad.

Andrew - The air conditioner in my apartment has 3 settings: "Low," "High" and "The Shiznit." It really only came with 2 settings, but I wanted a setting that I could use when I had company over so I could go, "This is the shiznit! This is the shiznit!"

Jill - It's all about thongs and cocoa butter recently, except for the days when it's about really large terry cloth underwear and Ben Gay, which are the days I call, "weekdays."

Chris - I was raised in the Virgin Islands so I understand the tropical culture. I also understand bedding vacationing women with nothing more than a bottle of 15 sunscreen and a series of vague threats about local customs.

Tony M.- I wear only wool shorts, so summer humidity can be tough on me. So can the Clap, which has nothing to do with wool but which covers my groin in open sores every 2 weeks and can be "somewhat scratchy."

THE BITTER END

147 Bleecker St. btw. LaGuardia & Thompson

ACEFS to W 4th St. / 6 to Bleecker St.

It was only a couple of weeks ago that the lights went out in New York City. I asked the gang what they did with all that darkness...

Ethan - I was playing volleyball in the park with my volleyball club when it happened. We were all like, "So what if there's a blackout? I never heard of a volleyball game that needed electricity." Then this one guy said that in real tournament volleyball they keep score with electric scoreboards. But we were still like, "Volleyball rules, and so does this volleyball club we all belong to!"

WhyNot - I'm French Canadian so I spent most of the blackout fielding insults from the "Patriots" across the hall, who were lying on the floor and yelling threats under my door.

Andrew - I was really excited by the opportunity to make something out of the night so I took all the neighborhood kids up to my roof and charged them each a dollar to look up and see the stars. I mean, these are kids who don't get out much, so it's really an experience for them to see something new like that.

Brett B. - I was doing a really loose afternoon set with my acoustic jam band, Marmalade, so we didn't miss a beat. The club did, however. The lights went out, someone broke a bunch of bottles behind the bar and the people all started yelling and panicking, so it wasn't "seamless," but what is, really?

Chris - I was sitting in the pitch black staring at the back of my mind the way I always do on weekdays anyway, so I didn't even notice until a few minutes before 10 PM when I went to watch Matlock on PAX and realized I couldn't.

Jon B.- I happened to be lying in the bushes in Central Park with a thermos of coffee, a roast beef sandwich and a battery-powered stun gun when it all went down, so I was cool with it.

THE BITTER END

147 Bleecker St. btw. LaGuardia & Thompson
ACEFS to W 4th St. / 6 to Bleecker St.

School's back in session. The 2003-2004 curriculum is now available at Redtime U. Sign up quick. Fake schools tend to fill up before you know it...

Political Science 1202 - What if The U.S. Government Kills

Everybody? - Dr. Eubanks

This course will explore what will happen if everybody that isn't a member of the U.S. Government is killed. It will cover such topics as, "What Do 300 White Men In Dark Suits Do All Day?" And "What To Do With All This Cash?"

Philosophy 3321 - I Know I'm Me, and I Know That Sorta' Sucks - Dr. Jansveld

Dr. Jansveld will spend the semester looking at his life honestly, admitting his failures while saying things like, "If not P, then not Q," and other lame Philosophy sayings that don't mean anything.

Women's Studies 202 - Men Are Semi-Cool - Dr. Seifers

Dr. Seifers returns from her sabbatical to Greece to teach her popular 202 course which was previously called Women's Studies 202 - Men Are Incapable of Pleasing Me In Bed

Geography 3311 - All The Islands In The World- Dr. Walsh

Dr. Walsh will spend 3 months naming all the islands in the world, starting from biggest and working to smallest, while touching people in the front row of the classroom inappropriately.

Note: Dr. Walsh is not a teacher at Redtime U, and you should not take this class unless you want to know the name of every island in the world, want to sit in the front row of the classroom and be touched inappropriately, or both.

Chemistry 1212 - Cocaine - Dr. Cheek

This course is designed to give students a crash course in how to cook and do coke without alienating your family or childhood friends.

Note: The Eric Clapton song, Cocaine, will be played on repeat throughout every class. Plan Accordingly.

Linguistics 101 - Ghetto Chatter - Dr. Sherman

Though having no formal training aside from a mistaken bus trip through Harlem last year, Dr. Sherman will use old MTV episodes of the Real World and the original Tone Loc album to bring the ghetto into the classroom. He'll cover thugged out phrases like, "What's Up?," "That's Sooo Weak," "Hey Now," and "Super!"

Mass Comm 4400 - How To Write a Personal Ad That Will Improve Your Chances Of Kidnapping Someone - Dr. Babu

Dr. Babu returns from 2-4 years away from teaching to shed some light on how to trick someone into meeting up with you somewhere dark just by taking out an ad in the paper.

Someday they will look back on the past few years and wonder about Redtime. What will they wonder? It's really too hard to say. Who are "they?" I honestly don't know. So I asked the gang what they most wanted to be remembered for...

Ethan - I hope they wonder what made us tick. I hope they wonder what inspired us to create our music. I hope they wonder what it all meant to us. I hope they wonder how to get in contact with us and repay us with money for all those years they stole from us.

Steve - Redtime is the only thing I do that isn't online. So I've chatted about this subject more than a few times, in more than like 5 chat rooms, and the people that matter already know what I'm all about. AIM: BigSteve1972 - YIM: silk&lace ;)

Bill - I want to be remembered for more than just playing in Redtime and model trains, so I'm pretty busy these days just trying to figure something else out. It's a process, and I just keep reminding myself that the answer can't include models or trains or model trains.

Chris - I'm really hoping that they catch whoever bludgeoned that NYU kid with my sax backstage at the Halloween show. Maybe if he wasn't talking big stuff about his jam band and graduating from college it wouldn't have happened.

WhyNot - I take Yoga at CRUNCH and drink Iced Tea with Gingko added so I'm not going to die, which is one of the coolest things about Eastern philosophy.

Tony - I've spent the last 6 years of my life not eating fruits and vegetables. I only eat hero bread. I think that's gotta be worth something, especially considering how "obsessed" we've all become with health. I do throw up a lot, but I think that's just "stress."

Andrew - I would be happy to take a trip out West with nothing more than my backpack, my dog, some powerbars and a few pounds of H to sell so I don't run out of money. I'd also like the H so I can shoot it every morning and pretend that I like hitching rides in the desert and living out of a backpack.

NOTE: Yodeler (this shitty play our friend is in) cast members will definitely be in attendance at the gig. Be cool about it, too.

Redtime*Friday, November 28th, 2003 10:00 PM*"The Turkey Show" **JOIN US IN GIVING THANKS TO EVERYTHING EVERYWHERE!*THE BITTER END

147 Bleecker St. btw. LaGuardia & Thompson
 ACEFS to W 4th St. / 6 to Bleecker St.

So another Thanksgiving is on the way, and though the passing time reminds the band about their personal and professional achievements, it is also important for them to give thanks for the little things that make life worth living...

Ethan - I'm really thankful for virtual reality (VR) and the advanced gaming community (AGC) that I've found at 3PM in the parking lot at the local middle school (MS).

Steve - I'm most thankful for silk sheets, iced cold Red Bull and dirty dancing, in that order, except silk sheets is really number 2 and Red Bull is really my shiznit.

WhyNot - In Iceland we celebrated a holiday called Srunkar, which is exactly like Thanksgiving except we eat white cranes instead of turkeys and we drink the gravy out of water glasses.

Nick - I'm thankful for the word "thanks." It means a lot to me. So do the words, "Deep Funk," and "I'm not suing you anymore," but for different reasons.

Jenny - I'm most thankful this year for the ancient art forms known as karate and reading.

Andrew - I make sure to mention the word tryptophan as many times as possible throughout dinner, and never assume that people might actually be getting tired because they're bored by "after dinner" Thanksgiving and want to go home instead of talking.

* Being "Turkey" is not the same thing as being "Chicken," which does virtually nothing to the outcome of Friday's Gig.

NOTE: You can affect the outcome of the gig by showing up, sitting down, and cold rocking your body out.
